ORDINANCE REVIEW COMMITTEE

Town Building Ordinance - Get the Facts
Repeal or Revise
Looking Back or Forward

Background

In 2008 the Town of Vienna created and updated a Comprehensive Town Plan. The plan gave the town guidelines to work towards to ensure that it develop in a manner that would promote healthy growth.

The Comprehensive Plan serves many purposes but most importantly, it is a way for local people to have control over the future of their town.

- It serves as an expression of the townspeople’s vision for their future.
- It is a means to guide future growth and development.
- It is a means to control taxes by minimizing the costs to the town for future development.
- It is a legal foundation for regulations, if and when the town adopts them.
- It helps in obtaining grants such as: to improve water quality of ponds; recreational grants for public access to ponds, town parks and trails, including snowmobile trails; funding for housing and septic system upgrades; historic preservation grants; and grants for fire protection and emergency shelter equipment.

Included in the “top recommendations” in the Comprehensive Plan are:

- A. Update the “Notification of Construction” to be a Building Ordinance
- B. A list of suggested items to be included in the Building Ordinance
- C. Adequate funding for enforcement of Ordinances - (Link to the entire plan)

In 2016 The Selectmen appointed three citizens to the Ordinance Review Committee. This committee worked with the Planning Board to create a Building Ordinance to replace the old “Notification of Construction” which was created in 1978, 39 years ago. The new Building Ordinance and the building permit form was voted on and accepted by the town at the March 2016 Town Meeting.

Current Concerns - We Heard You!

In 2017 the committee has been working to improve upon the ordinance and will continue to address citizen’s concerns with ambiguities that may be in the ordinance. Several types of small structures such as E-Z ups, cold frames, camping tents, screen tents etc. will be specifically excepted from permits even though there was no intention of requiring permits for them in the first place (and no permits for these types of structures have been issued or required). Fees and setbacks will be reconsidered.

ORDINANCE CONTINUED

What the Building Ordinance does and does not do:

1. Anything that was built or was legally in place before the Building Ordinance was passed is grandfathered and does not have to be altered to meet the required rules.
2. Storage of recreational vehicles (RVs) on a property is absolutely allowed as long as setbacks are met. No permit is needed for RVs parked, but not occupied.
3. The Ordinance does not stop any type of structure from being erected. It merely requires that the structure meet setbacks and plumbing code regulations.
4. The setbacks and permitting rules of the Ordinance were put in place to:
 - a. Protect neighboring property owners
 - b. Provide adequate parking on lots so overnight parking on town roads will not be necessary
 - c. Allow adequate room for snow removal
 - d. Ensure that the town assessor will be able to locate and evaluate new structures
 - e. Avoid declining property values
 - f. Ensure that occupied structures and occupied recreational vehicles provide adequate wastewater disposal to protect public health, hygiene, wells and the environment of streams and other water sources
 - g. Higher fees benefit the taxpayer by covering the town's costs of enforcement.

FROM THE HEALTH OFFICER

Town Meeting Questions: Drinking Water vs Beach Water Testing, and Hepatitis Immunization Questions

Dan Onion, MD, MPH
Mt. Vernon/Vienna Health Officer
293-2076; dkonion@gmail.com
March, 2017

Mark Rains and Roger Reveille asked me a set of questions at our March 11 town meeting this year that others may also be wondering, so I'll expand my answers to them here.

At the meeting, Roger asked if testing the Flying Pond beach just once a year was sufficient protection and I responded that I thought it was. What I didn't say in the meeting but explained later to Roger, was that the $60 the town voted is sufficient for two tests if needed. At least a couple times in the past, I've had a borderline test and gone back to re-test a week or two later. The standard test for a swim beach is a measurement of how many fecal (poop) bacteria (Escherichia coli or Enterobacter) are in one cubic centimeter (cc) of the water. The standard swim beach test is for the E. coli. In drinking water any such contamination would be unacceptable, but for swim areas, standards are lower because people, even children, actually swallow very little water when swimming, or as the Environmental Protection Agency calls it, "recreating" there. Instead, the standard is set so that there would be fewer than 35 fecal illness episodes in 1000 people who swam there, whereas the drinking water standard would be none. I usually get 1-12 bacteria per cc of lake water; once I did get 249, but repeats were way back down. I had taken the sample just after some heavy rains, which may have temporarily washed some animal poop off the shore. I had worried about a septic system leak, but subsequent normal tests made that highly unlikely.

After the meeting, Mark asked why we didn't test as often and extensively as the Grange does the Kimball Pond spring. I explained that in Maine, lake water standards are different in the ways I just outlined above, because lakes must only be safe for swimming and fishing, not for drinking unless the water is treated (with chlorination). That's why most camp owners, who draw pond water, use it for bathing, laundry and toilets, but use bottled water for drinking and cooking.

Finally, Roger later asked me about hepatitis. The rescue/firefighters are immunized with a 3-shot immunization series against Hepatitis B. He asked when they should get boosters. The answer to that is that in immunocompetent people, like most of us and certainly firefighters, the initial series of shots leads to more than 15 years of measurable antibody levels against Hepatitis B in over 95%. And even after that, research has found that immunologic "memory" is retained and will quickly produce more antibody if challenged by a Hepatitis B invasion. This could change as new studies follow people for decades. But for now, no re-immunization or even antibody measurement is recommended. Healthcare workers, potentially exposed on a daily basis to blood, might be an exception and probably should be re-immunized after 10-15 years with a single vaccination. He also asked whether Hepatitis C too can be prevented by a vaccine. The answer to that one is no. Hepatitis C is a viral liver disease like Hepatitis A and B but almost always transmitted by intravenous drug use through needle sharing. Thus it is best prevented by not using IV drugs. There is now relatively effective treatment with shots after it is diagnosed; but that's not so good that it can be counted on to work always.

Maybe we could have more town meetings to get more public health questions and discussion?

DR. SHAW MEMORIAL LIBRARY NEWS

“Reading – an endless journey: a long, indeed never ending journey that makes one more temperate as well as more loving and kind.” Nina George, the Little Paris Bookshop

Build a Better World – we are still plotting and planning this summer’s reading program for our young patrons. In order to free up possible long weekends for families, we are thinking of switching our programs to Wednesday afternoons (rather than Mondays), at the usual 4:00 starting time. We’d love to hear suggestions from families about what time works best, and we’ll see what we can manage.

Meanwhile, a bit of family read-aloud time before bed is a perfect ending to a hectic day.

We’ve got our picture books about Spring out on the table in the children’s room, and there is so much great juvenile fiction on the mantel. We have a new copy of Henry Beston & Elizabeth Coatsworth’s Chimney Farm Bedtime Stories, donated to us from the wonderful Gulf of Maine Bookstore in Brunswick – that is a perfect choice for the end of the day!

People have been enjoying looking through the old books from Dr. and Mrs. Shaw’s personal library (both their medical and household collections), and we’ve gotten quite a few donations of more recent books, fiction and nonfiction. Please feel free to come in and browse and bring a few items home with you. We are asking $1.00 for hardcover books, and $.50 for paperbacks. This is a good way to expand your own home library, restock the shelves upta camp, or simply to pass along to friends and family members.

We’ll be collecting food labels for a while more, to give to the Mt. Vernon Elementary School PTC, to raise money for school activities. There’s a container at the front desk, please save your labels and give them to us or bring them to school!

Websites to explore this month:

1. Maine Memory Network is an online museum of various historical artifacts from our state. I was exploring it the other day, looking for information about Joshua Chamberlain (Civil War hero, governor, and president of Bowdoin College) for someone. There were great photos and an image of a telegram he had written, among other items. You can visit the Network at:

<http://www.mainememory.net/>

2. MainePublic’s new feature, Poems From Here, put together by our state Poet Laureate, Stuart Kestenbaum. Listening to him read the work of various Maine poets is a great way to end the week! He has a new recording each Friday.

<http://mainepublic.org/programs/poems-here-maine-poet-laureate-stuart-kestenbaum#stream/0>

DR. SHAW MEMORIAL LIBRARY NEWS CONTINUED

3. The Metropolitan Museum of Art puts the full text of many of its art books online. A nice way to lose yourself on a cold or stormy day: <http://www.metmuseum.org/art/metpublications>
4. There are many colleges & universities who are offering free classes, and other learning resources, online these days. Here are two websites that can get you started: <http://academicearth.org/> and <http://www.openculture.com/>
5. And lastly, spring and summer are coming (fingers crossed), so you might want to do a bit of planning for summer outings. Maine’s Bureau of Parks and Lands lets you search for various state parks and monuments that would make wonderful destinations. Access their information here: <http://www.maine.gov/dacf/parks/index.shtml>

We’re hearing from lots of people that they have started seedlings, and are planning their gardens (don’t forget the old adage: plant peas on Patriot’s Day! – depending on how much snow we still have, of course...). We’re still looking for seed donations for our exchange, and remember we have a great collection of gardening books to inspire and inform you. That makes me want to revisit Katharine White’s lovely book of essays from my home library, Onward and Upward in the Garden. What will you be reading as the sap runs and we contend with mud season?

Mud Season is Here

Sign up now for erosion control assistance

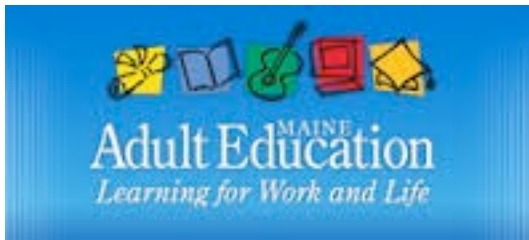

Temperatures are rising, snowbanks are falling, and runoff is racing toward our lakes. Runoff from rain and melting snow is one of the biggest threats to water quality, because as it travels across bare ground, it picks up soil particles and other pollutants. These pollutants can cause algal blooms, harm fish populations, and decrease the overall environmental and recreational value of a lake. Luckily, there are easy steps you can take to reduce runoff. Let us help you!

Our Youth Conservation Corps (YCC) provides erosion control landscaping to lakefront property owners. If your property has a dirt driveway, patches of bare soil, or an eroding shoreline, then you likely qualify for a reduced cost YCC project. For more information, visit the YCC page on our website and request a free site visit.

We also offer assistance improving camp roads. Unpaved roads are heavily affected by mud season, resulting in ruts, gullies, and potholes. However, proper road management can reduce time and money spent on repairs, as well as the road's effect on water quality. For technical assistance, or guidance forming a road association, contact us at info@30mileriver.org or (207) 860-4043.
